The business staff consisted of Ron Kidder, business manager; Sue Henrizi, assistant business manager; assisted by Curtis Groves, Cindy Kerby, Tom Maunder, Else Mendel, and Debby Swanson. Advising the business staff was Mr. Robert Rentschler.

Most important in any school's goal is the education of its youths and their development into fine, productive, well-adjusted citizens. J.W. Sexton High School is no different in its aims. Winning teams mean very little if a school does not also have good academic records and standards. Sexton has managed to maintain both of these objectives in their correct proportions. The teachers, counselors, and administrators are the basis for these policies. They try to offer programs to fill the needs of the students under their direction and guidance to help in choosing a well-mapped course to be followed by each person along the Route through 66.

Academic

Elected by Lansing's parents to educate their youth, the board of education funnels many millions of tax dollars into the schools each year. At intervals the members must face the citizens with a request to commit new funds to education: 1966 was a dramatic year in school finance. Though the community did not approve a bonding proposal that would have improved Sexton's facilities, the board cooperated with a voluntary citizen's committee to plead with the people for sufficient operating funds.

Several new programs of interest to Sexton students were perpetuated in 1966. Six newly annexed school districts began sending students here; Lincoln school was converted into a special education center; and the board of education unveiled plans for a new central administration building which will improve physical and instructional services to all Lansing schools.

Not all acts of the board attract so much public notice, many are routine: salary negotiations, educational policies, and the usual expenditures. But in all of its actions, the board of education dedicates itself to providing Lansing's youth with quality education.

Sexton's principal Mr. Christian H. Roosenraad lead staff, faculty, and students through another successful school year. Other than acting as chief policy maker, he also represented the school to the community. Being the principal of an 1800 pupil high school was more than an eight-hour a day job. The responsibility of maintaining a good educational climate involved foresight and dedication by Mr. Roosenraad.

Mr. Thomas Walsh discusses a problem with President Mrs. Nellie Nussdorfer at a Board of Education meeting.

School Board,

About the only students who may not be aware of Mr. Cassius Shaft's good humor are those who have been compelled to see him in regard to disciplinary problems. In addition to being disciplinarian, he advises the Student Council, keeps attendance records, and directs the school safety program. However, Mr. Shaft performs not only his administrative obligations but also is one of Sexton's biggest boosters.

As the person in charge of extra-curricular activities, guidance, and scholarships, Miss Elizabeth Lawry demonstrates all of the facets that make her invaluable to Sexton. Miss Lawry is characterized by her efficiency and keen interest in the students as individuals. Few students leave Sexton without having worked with her, for she makes a point of getting to know as many students as she possibly can.

The development of communication skills is essential in both the attainment of social adeptness and in the logical organization and concise expression of ideas. The courses offered by Sexton's English department are gauged to meet the different needs of the student and to prepare him for successful and effective living. Investigation of many kinds of literature, such as poetry, short stories, novels, drama, and the essay, is encouraged as individual research and as class work. This incorporates not only reading the material but imitating the various styles of writing.

Sophomores are generally paraphrasing and discussing the works of the great American writers. Occasionally such literature as The Loon Feather or Judgment at Nuremburg creeps into sophomore reading. The mark of a junior is a copy of A Tale of Two Cities or Return of the Native among his endless pile of texts.

An immense stack of notecards, carefully rubber-banded together, is the status symbol of the honorable seniors. During the spring semester, each person writes a long term on a topic that he has chosen as interesting and worthy of extensive research. A great sigh of relief is heard when, at last, the paper has been turned in.

Miss Cora Jewell

Mr. Bryce Forester

To encourage students to become more involved in the diverse languages and cultures of our neighbors abroad, Sexton offers three year study programs in Latin, Spanish, French, and German. Other than Latin which teaches background for modern languages, the emphasis in foreign language curricula is being changed from reading and writing to basic oral work. This emphasis is being accomplished through the use of new textbooks and the language laboratory. In the language lab, students listen to taped voices of natives of the language that they are learning and repeat various drills into microphones so that the teacher may hear them and correct their errors. From this experience, the individual can practice what has been learned in class and improve his listening comprehension and his own accent.

In addition to basic language comprehension, today's courses are being enriched through the study of the culture and environment of the people who speak the language.

Miss Jewell employs the valuable language lab in her lessons.

Events, problems, and solutions—new

"History often repeats itself" is the cry of many of the social studies teachers at Sexton. Relating the past to the future is certainly one of the greatest objectives of any of the varied courses offered. Promoting good citizenship is another.

Besides the usual classes: world history, U.S. history, american government, comparative government, world geography, and economics, two new classes have been added to the second semester social studies curriculum. Sociology and the state and local government seminar may be elected by students who have excelled in social studies in the past. The class of sociology will involve itself with the study of the origin of society and the forms, functions, and problems of human groups. The state and local government seminar informs and demonstrates the workings of governmental machinery within state boundaries. The teaching of sociology has been turned over to Mrs. Jean Dykema, while the state and local government seminar is taught by Mr. Lee Wenke at the Lansing Public Library. As a source of enrichment of the regular curriculum, these classes are stimulating a greater interest in the social studies field than has been shown by students in years.

Footlights, podium, time clock—Symbols of Self-expression

Self confidence and poise are assets an individual must acquire; they do not always come naturally. Speech, as taught by Mr. Harlow Claggett, tends to rid students of the squeamishness that often accompanies public speaking or being thrown into a new situation. Most students attain the ability to organize thoughts quickly, a knowledge of parliamentary procedure and the different forms of speeches before they complete this one semester course.

Debate students quickly learn the value of reference materials. The accumulative knowledge acquired by hours of research pays off when the debate is actually conducted. But, logic as well as evidence is found to be necessary to make a case, be it negative or affirmative, stand firm under the attack of an opposing team.

Dramatics is not just the study of acting techniques. This class includes information on the principles of set design, construction, lighting, blocking, and other technicalities that go on "behind the scenes." Student directors from the class produce short plays such as The Sandbox by Arthur Miller as though they were full-scale productions.

Home Ec. students master foods, clothing, home management basics

The home economics department aims to create an awareness of the many problems of home living and to increase the students' ability to solve these problems. The teachers tried to achieve this through the development of skills, habits, and attitudes which make for successful homemaking. The influence of the courses offered was carried into the students' present homes and gives a foundation for their future homes.

In working with the problems of a student's diet, wardrobe, personal habits or housing, all close parts of everyday living, the instructor soon becomes aware of existing problems. Girls were encouraged to take responsibility in the home. Teachers tried to view each student as an individual.

In the foods classes, students were taught the skills necessary for preparing tasty, economical, well-balanced meals, while clothing classes constructed attractive wearing apparel. The family living course encompassed problems of home management, vocations, and social problems as well as child care and interior decorating.

Offered at Sexton for the first time, Forkner Shorthand brought new interest to the business curriculum. Mrs. Kathryn Pierson taught this form of speed writing which includes some symbols and some regular letters. College-bound students have already found this course extremely useful in taking notes that do not have to be transcribed.

Approximately one fifth of Sexton's students were involved in business courses of some type. Shorthand, bookkeeping, retailing, office machines, typing, and business law give students an adequate background for a number of business occupations. The attainment of typing and shorthand skills eases note taking and preparation of final drafts of school work.

The new Forkner shorthand was very popular with both business and college prep students.

The math department decided that a change was needed in the second year algebra curriculum. The switch established the math sequence as algebra 3 and trigonometry instead of algebra 3 and 4. The feeling of the math teachers is that algebra 4 is more difficult than trig; so the math sequence was changed logically from the easier to more difficult topics.

A new technique in mastering mathematical principles is to limit the amount of memorization and base the course on understanding the basic concepts. The ability to draw logical conclusions on the basis of factual math known is now essential for success in the field of mathematics. A wide range of courses is offered at Sexton in an effort to give the student adequate preparation for his future.

Inquisitive minds probe physical and biological sciences

Study in the physical and biological sciences leads to the development of critical thinking and the drawing of logical conclusions. Sexton's laboratories are equipped to offer students a chance to test by experimentation what they have learned in their texts. Dissection of animals from worms to frogs and the growing of all kinds of plants in the greenhouse adds interest to biology.

A person can bet that the horrible smells that occasionally fill the school may be traced to the chemistry rooms. The investigation of the composition of matter and the changes in this composition are often a far greater teacher than the classroom work can ever be. The usual label of being a dry, somewhat unimaginative course does not apply to physics at Sexton; it is a unique experience. At what other point in his life can a student go monkey hunting in a class room? Where else can he see the actual working of Gumperson's Rule, (If anything can possibly go wrong, it will.)?

But, no matter how inventive the teaching techniques may be, students are still taught some of the basic physical truths of nature and their practical application.

Mrs. Jeanette Achterberg gives that "little extra effort" she heard in the assembly presented by football star, R. C. Owens.

The development of good sportsmanship and coordination as well as the conditioning and discipline of the mind and body remain, as in years past, basic goals in the physical education program.

Students participate in both individual sports such as tennis, golf, and archery, and group sports such as basketball, volleyball, football, and softball. The aim is to build proficiency in a variety of activities and to learn the rules for the sport and the techniques for most effective playing. Swimming is offered to both boys and girls. Teachers stress building of endurance and the perfection of the basic strokes for safety in the water and personal recreation.

Other than indoor and outdoor sports, health units are taught throughout the year. The topics for the sessions vary from one semester to the next, such as different phases of disease, the effects of alcohol and tobacco on the human body, and first aid.

New at Sexton this year, Mr. Charles Ginther, head wrestling coach, proves to himself that he's just as physically fit as the boys he coaches.

A great part of the class time is spent in architectural drafting learning cost estimation, material selection, and contracting procedures. Students have an opportunity for on-the-job training as "pre-apprentices." In engine mechanics students are taught the fundamentals of the internal combustion engine, maintenance, and repair. Auto body presents students with the basic skills of welding, bumping, and painting.

Industrial classes emphasize the mastery of trades such as printing, woodworking, and mechanics. Sexton's printing classes print programs, tickets, and posters for various school functions. In the application of their skills, students use the methods of type-setting, locking type forms, and feeding the press. Drafting classes explore the fields of mechanical and freehand drawing. Projects were emphasized in woodworking and machine shops.

Mrs. Phyllis Danielson views a student's work.

Students choosing courses in the art department enter into a world of colors, designs, and textures, and hopefully emerge with a deeper understanding of and appreciation for artistic values. Technique is also emphasized in the curriculum which includes a wide variety of courses. Offered to students who have completed the prerequisite of general art are classes in crafts, commercial art, design, drawing and painting, and advanced art.

The study of art on Sexton's fourth floor is interesting not only to those hoping for related careers, but to students simply seeking enjoyment from an experience in an art course.

As a part of the Economic Opportunity Act of the Federal Aid Program, the Neighborhood Youth Corps provides employment for high school students ages sixteen to nineteen. Ninety-five Sexton students participated in this program last year, meeting the requirement of extensive financial need. Each student worked at the minimum wage an average of two and one half hours per day. Employment was by non-profit organizations.

The organization of the co-op program gave students a chance to earn money toward their future while earning credits toward graduation. These people divided their day between classes and work. Local businesses employ the co-op students on a part time basis, giving them experience in sales or secretarial work.

Tailored for exceptional students with inequities in their learning backgrounds, Sexton's Special Education program guided fifty-six people along Route 66. With three teachers and relatively small classes, the students received concentrated attention in the subject areas they need the most to prepare them to live efficiently.

Mr. Dale France tries to teach not only driving skills but also the importance of driver safety precautions and good attitudes.

In the state of Michigan, a student who has successfully passed a driver's education class may apply for the privilege of holding a driver's license. In order to qualify for license application, the student must pass both the written and controlled driving tests. Many driving situations are simulated on the range so that students are better prepared when they are finally on their own.

The need for good attitudes as well as driving skills was stressed in movies, lectures, and discussions. Such topics as the use of seatbelts, the Smith System, and the parts of a car motor occupied three class hours a week. The cars students used were provided by the Oldsmobile Division of General Motors.

Popular paperbacks now sold in library

Miss Donna Perrine reads one of the many periodicals that come into the library weekly.

In addition to over 9,000 books previously available to faculty and students at Sexton, last year marked the beginning of paperback sales in the library. Miss Donna Perrine and Mrs. Maxine Edwards, the two head librarians, served as salesmen before and after school. Students and faculty have access to the most recent books on the market through this new outlet.

At four different times during the school year, hardback books were ordered. These new books were displayed just inside the library doors. The hardback and paperback books plus pamphlets and magazines combine to make Sexton's library a valuable aid to everyone.

Head librarians Miss Donna Perrine and Mrs. Maxine Edwards encourage reading for enjoyment and class work, order current books and magazines, and help students in their search in any way they can.

Many perplexing questions greet a sophomore when he enters high school, questions which he often may take to his counselor. One of the team of seven counselors is eager to offer solutions to the problems confronting the tenth grader. Their guidance extends to juniors and seniors as well as to frustrated sophomores. In order to serve these students, counselors have a knowledge of all phases of Sexton's curriculum and of various college opportunities. The institution of I.B.M. scheduling brought new confusion which the counselors aptly resolved. As a guide for college planning, many seniors turn to their counselors for aid in interpreting college materials. The counselors straighten out much of the inner conflict that arises at Sexton.

Mrs. Grace Eiserman counsels students in their high school schedules as well as their plans for the future.

The counselors were Miss Else Fee, Mr. Hal Bergan, Mr. Vern Dunham, Miss Elizabeth Lawry, Mr. Lester Norton, Mrs. Grace Eiserman, Mr. Larry Hill, and Mr. Wayne Rogers.

Mrs. Lena Clark and Mrs. Geraldine Craig spent busy days filling the requests of the students and the staff.

As a new member of the office staff, Mrs. Roberta Miller found no lack of jobs that needed doing.

Secretaries tackle variety of duties

Miss Nancy Laing types administrative communications, takes phone messages, and sells tickets for many school activities.

Mrs. Roberta Miller joined Mrs. Geraldine Craig, Mrs. Lena Clark, and Miss Nancy Laing in tackling the stacks of paperwork in the main office during the past school year. Their days were filled with such chores as selling tickets, sorting mail, telephoning, and keeping records. The efficient performance of the various office duties was necessary to keep Sexton running smoothly behind the scenes. Our quartet of secretaries combined their office skills with their pleasing personalities to prove an asset to the persons at Sexton last year.

Members of the Cafeteria Staff are Mrs. Arlene Nonhof, Mrs. Hope Bates, Director, Mrs. Gertrude Vaughan, Mrs. Johan Fulton, Mrs. Joyce Gibbs, Mrs. Clara Gladstone, Mrs. Ann Harmon, Mrs. Harriet Westfall, Mrs. Helen Jones and Mrs. Helen Strong.

Lunch preparation occupies cafeteria staff

An early hour found the lights of Sexton's cafeteria shining on an industrious staff. Under the supervision of Mrs. Hope Bates, eleven women prepared six hundred lunches sold daily. All of the food was made by Sexton's cafeteria staff. Ice cream was contained in machines installed last year; students enjoyed this facility very much.

Student assistance was employed for serving food and cleaning dishes. In return for their help, those working received free lunches.

Marilyn Bailey and Sam Johnson assist Mrs. Helen Strong, Mrs. Helen Jones and Mrs. Gertrude Vaughan in the preparation of lunch.

Custodians on the job year 'round

Mr. Hugh Montgomery keeps the pool properly chlorinated according to state health regulations.

Mrs. Clara Janz supplies the girls' gym classes with clean towels and swimming suits.

Mr. Alva Baker, one of Sexton's firemen, keeps heating regulated properly during the cold winter months.

Working both day and night, Sexton's custodial staff maintained the school and its grounds. Beginning with the raising of the flag, the janitors were kept busy answering the staff's special requests and doing the routine jobs necessary to keep the school running smoothly.

Two firemen alternated working hours in order to properly regulate the heating system and keep watch for any signs of trouble in the boiler rooms. When most students left the school at 3:30 p.m., the janitors stayed on cleaning and preparing the building for the following day.

Mr. Walter Shellberg, who alternates working hours with Mr. Al Baker, watches over the boiler rooms for any signs of trouble.

The custodial staff: Mr. Jesse Jackson, Mr. Charles Rathfoot, Mr. Eustace Roggow, Mr. John Cherpes, Mr. Lynn Locke, Mr. Fred Strieter.

The number of extracurricular activities groups in a school the size of Sexton is fantastic. Although differing in subject matter, their purpose remains universal: all are trying to extend the knowledge of the individual in a field in which he has expressed interest or has done outstanding work. These organizations, sponsored by the school and its faculty, provide constructive ways to fill time that might otherwise be spent uselessly. Many times projects in community and school service are the year's-end objective. The experiences and insight gained in working with others toward common goals last a lifetime.

Activities

Student body communicates with administration through Student Council

The 1965-1966 Student Council was an active one, providing a unique bridge between the student body and the faculty and administration. After homeroom and class elections, the council was split into committees which began functioning at once. The executive committee met to smooth procedure and plan the semesters' agendas.

Under the leadership of the first semester president, the organization adopted a plan to support a Vietnamese orphan for two years, funds supplied by student contributions and the council treasury. Also, the homecoming activities were organized and carried through. Sexton's Student Council hosted the 6A Conference which discussed mutual problems and possible solutions of the schools included. This group sponsored most of the after-game dances, clean-up drives, and safety checks. Second semester the council was attempting to pass legislation making the offices of secretary and treasurer part of the general election which already elected the president and vice-president. It coordinated a Twirp dance and Scurve Day celebration that the students received enthusiastically. On Twirp Day the roles of girls and boys were reversed, and the girls carried the boys' books and escorted them to classes. The traditional Scurve Day produced a bevy of costumes reflecting the school spirit which led the Big Reds on to a victory over Eastern that night. Certainly, the Student Council was a fine representation of a spirited student body.

Second semester officers, president Rob Flewelling and vice president Joe Gravina, review the agenda of Student Council activities with the advisor Mr. Cassius Shaft.

Honor Society upholds high standards of character and scholarship

Each semester last year, an impressive, traditional ceremony greeted initiates of Sexton's chapter of the National Honor Society. The initiates walked in pairs toward a candle lit table, the candles representing character, scholarship, leadership, and service. Later members enlarged upon these four qualities in brief speeches to the group.

When the business of the meetings was completed, the students enjoyed varied forms of entertainment. Mr. Richard Yarger presented fascinating slides of Alaska, featuring his study of glacial movements. At several of the three meetings held each semester, Bob Stow, Nancy Harrington, and Fred Purdy sang folk songs. Mary Bollman joined them on one occasion.

At the Christmas party that Eastern's Honor Society hosted for Sexton and Everett, a play reading of The Crucible was presented as the program. Interesting to note is the fact that of the three chapters at the party, Sexton maintains the highest standards for membership. Sexton students must have an established point average plus teachers' recommendations; whereas the other two schools initiate those in the top twenty-five percent scholastically.

Niger represented at M.U.N.A.

European tourists John Issbister, Laurel Tonn, and Else Mendel presented slides of their European visits at U.N. Panel meetings held in members' homes. The host or hostess took charge of the program, often inviting a foreign or an exchange student.

MUNA, a mock United Nations assembly, highlighted the panel's year. Held annually at Hillsdale College, Sexton's members represented Niger in March, 1966. An extensive knowledge of Niger and its delegates to the United Nations enabled Sextonites to characterize Nigerian representatives authentically.

One of the chief rewards of the panelists' studies lies in their increased comprehension of what the United Nations stands for and accomplishes.

Student body appreciates library service

The jobs entrusted to Sexton's Library Staff, service and organization, prove vital for a library to effectively aid the student body. A knowledge of the alphabet may seem elementary, but it is one skill that staff members spent hours employing in arranging bookshelves and filing material. Behind the desk, library helpers perform the task of lending and receiving books. The work involved in maintaining the library of a large school such as Sexton is appreciated by both the students and faculty.

Fresh ideas and team work spark Oracle's production

"Hi, team!"

Members of the Oracle staff spent many long hours of hard work in the publication of the 1966 yearbook. Tempers sometimes flared near deadline time, and a sign reading "Thou shalt not kill" served as a friendly reminder to keep emotions in check. A red plastic circle hovered over the niche of a slack member.

Although the staff was entirely new, it managed to learn the skills necessary for the successful production of a yearbook. As each page was turned in, a little piece of the staff went with it. When page proofs were returned, the finished, printed work made all the labor involved seem worthwhile. The driving thought over the year was this: an author may spend a lifetime in order to have a piece of his work printed, but the 1966 Oracle staff was to have the yearbook that it put together published without question. The members of this group did not want to betray the responsibility entrusted to them.

Senior editors, Alan Wakefield, Doug Colwell, Nancy Morrison, Nancy Wilson, and Nancy Spalding, were each charged with the planning of one section of the 1966 Oracle.

Zodiac staff prints gift Christmas issue

Students were pleasantly surprised when they received the special Christmas issue of the school newspaper, the Zodiac. The Christmas edition enabled the Zodiac staff to stay abreast of the school events which are usually covered by eight papers per year. The preparation involved in each publication took from three to four weeks of the entire forty-member staff's effort. The various section editors—feature, photography, exchange, sports, and editorial—were led by co-editors-in-chief Martha Wyeth and Diane Ehret. In compiling material for the deadlines, stories were assigned and written and copy was returned in a week to be read and decided upon the copy editor. The news paper, in entirety, was then sent to Eastern High School for printing.

Sexton's debaters

Debate is an extra-curricular activity which many people hear about, but very few know about. Debate doesn't sound like very much work. However, to the debaters who have participated, it means a great deal of research, planning, preparation, and practice. Win or lose, the hours of effort are rewarded by the satisfaction of having contributed one's best to a challenging task.

The proposition for debate this season was, "Resolved: that the federal government should adopt a program of compulsory arbitration in labor-management disputes in the basic industries." Varsity debaters came through with a record of 44 wins and 21 losses, while the J.V.'s won 30 and lost 18. The team ranked seventh in a poll of all the schools in the state, and won the first place trophy in the Outstate League. Finally, the team was eliminated in the Regional Tournament after victoriously coming through the Districts with the best record, and nominating the top speaker, Kathleen Walsh, for a state debate scholarship.

F.N.A. brightens Easter for invalids

Various programs throughout the year covered a wide range of topics. The valuable Candy Stripper service, which several girls volunteer for each year at local hospitals, was explained by Mrs. Merritt Stahl. Another speaker came from the Red Cross. Some of the topics discussed were alcoholism and unwed mothers.

When a meeting did not involve a speaker, members completed several work projects. Initiates took charge of a bulletin board display for room 329. The club decorated Easter eggs for the Pediatrics Ward at St. Lawrence Hospital.

Mary Wright, the head of the Finance Committee, planned a car wash and candy sale. With these funds, Tour Chairman Bonnie Harrison arranged an out-of-town trip for the club. Acquainting students with the nursing profession was the central aim of the Future Nurses of America.

Students preview a teaching career

The Future Teacher's Association of Sexton is affiliated with both the Michigan Education Association and the National Education Association. The general role of this club is to acquaint members with the extremely important and interesting teaching profession. Facts concerning the great need for good teachers and the future a teaching career may hold sparked enthusiasm among this group of young people who plan to make teaching their careers.

Particular interest was shown in the special education courses. Those seniors who were qualified gained valuable experience in teaching for two hours a day in local elementary schools.

JoBess Hineline, Bonnie Rood, Linda Benson, and Jeri Haptonstahl were four of the seniors who spent two hours a day aiding teachers in various Lansing area schools.

Y-Teens march for T.A.P. bread drive

Among the events which filled the Y-Teen's meetings were several community service projects. A wide variety of canned goods was collected at Christias for needy families. A great deal of time was spent in planning the Teens Against Polio bread drive. One Saturday afternoon was devoted to this city-wide activity.

A social worker from the Y.W.C.A. spoke to the club about making flower arrangements to be sold at the World Market held annually for the Greater Lansing public. The Y-Teens executed her suggested plan and made their contribution to those already given. Members of Y-Teen clubs from all over Lansing attended a hanging-of-the-greens Christmas party.

Sexton's chapter of the national Future Homemakers of America club undertook several activities during the 1965-1966 year. Among these was a talent show given by a few individuals in the club for the remainder of the members. Such topics as current fashions and dress etiquette provided interesting discussion subjects for various meetings.

Every other week the club members enjoyed food samples made by the advisor Mrs. Mary Billings. Money for the club treasury was supplied by the sale of baked goods among club members and a candy sale for the entire student body.

Liebermann's offer

The Sub Debs, a club limited to senior girls and advised by Miss Margaret Widick, aimed to help the girls better meet social problems. While acting as a source of friendly contact among students within the school, the organization also contributed to the community. Members provided canned foods to two needy families in order to make their Thanksgivings happier ones.

The decoration of a Christmas tree in the foyer highlighted the Christmas party with the Boys' Varsity Club. Several girls visited Liebermann's to learn the art of gift wrapping and then returned to demonstrate the new techniques to the rest of the club. The Sub Debs sponsor a tea for senior girls each spring.

Girls' League units discuss diverse topics

The general purpose of the Girls' League as stated by Miss Elizabeth Lawry is "to bind the girls in the school together in a voluntary organization which seeks to enhance each girl's skills in terms of her social, academic, and future career." The Girls' League Cabinet, the governing body, worked hard to plan meetings that would fulfill this purpose.

Sophomores, juniors, and seniors met in their separate groups to discuss various aspects of a general topic stipulated each semester.

A Girls' League Award was granted to one outstanding graduating senior. Also, a grant of $200 was given to one member chosen on a competitive basis to receive special recognition.

Lettermen express candid views on dating

While gaining helpful tips on the gracious and proper ways of handling a variety of social situations, the Sophisticated Sophs enjoyed interesting discussions. Four members of the Lettermen's Club expressed their diverse opinions on dating situations as they answered the girls' questions. At a joint meeting with the Commerce Club Miss Mary Rainey, a Peace Corps worker in the Philippines, told of the valuable new experiences which unfolded for her there. At a party for their mothers in January, the Sophisticated Sophs demonstrated their social adeptness.

G.A.A. holds "after-exams" pizza party

The planning of the spring and winter activities of the Girls' Athletic Association was left to the competent seven member, elected G.A.A. Board and its advisor, Mrs. Jeannette Acterberg. The officers and representatives of the three classes were also held responsible for the collection of dues and the recording of the points obtained by G.A.A. members when they participated in the various sports offered—basketball, badminton, bowling, billiards, archery, rifle club, and golf. The Board sponsored a pizza party for all Girls' Athletic Association members after first semester final exams. It also organized a picnic in the spring.

A new outlook on synchronized swimming was introduced to the Dolphynettes. Previously, the club presented a water show for the public, but no inter-school competition was held. Last year, Sexton's club, along with Eastern, Everett, and Waverly, participated in a synchronized swimming meet held on April 16 at Dwight Rich Junior High School. Three events were designated—beginning stunts, advanced stunts, and solo, duet, and trio routines. After judging by two M.S.& instructors and two members of the Sea Sprites, ribbons were given for stunts and trophies for the routines. In practice for these events, members practiced the breath and muscular control necessary for perfected individual and combination stunts.

Girls' Varsity Club contributes to

Athletic Department

The Girls' Varsity Club, a branch of G.A.A., is an organization for girls who have adequately proven their competency in several sports. In order to be a candidate for membership, a girl must have earned 650 participation points and have a good personality and scholastic record. A certain number of points are assigned to different sports so that the points accumulate depending upon the number of times and the degree to which a person participates. The complicated initiation involves dressing-up in specified costumes and doing whatever the members bid. The tasks performed range from singing the "Star Spangled Banner" while standing on a chair to playing leap-frog in the halls. At the final initiation ceremony a single red rose is presented to each new member.

The girls plan and sell basketball programs, and give a scholarship at the year's end to their most valuable member. They hold their annual Christmas party with the Varsity Lettermen.

What's this? A girl knitting in the hall? That's right—a girl knitting in the hall. She's busily working on her project for the Knitting Club. No longer is knitting doomed to a hidden home life; now it has been brought into the open in the formation of one of Sexton's newest clubs.

The girls spend an enjoyable hour developing their skill by learning a variety of stitches and patterns that may be employed in the creation of more attractive garments. The satisfaction in the successful completion of the year's projects is certainly a worthy payoff.

Lettermen inspire school spirit

"301, 302, 303 . . ." chanted several of the Varsity Lettermen's Club members to the puffing initiate doing push-ups in the foyer. Each semester boys who have earned at least one varsity letter must go through a rigorous and often embarrassing initiation before they are admitted to this elite group.

This year even sorcery could not save the bumbling Quakers from a stomping by the Sexton Big Reds at the Scurve Day assembly. Both teams were hilariously portrayed by the club members.

The Lettermen sell football programs during school hours and at the games. However, the money earned at the club-sponsored "Playnight" furnishes the greatest part of the group's funds. Swimming, volleyball, pingpong, and dancing are sports the enthusiastic participants enjoy. The money saved is used for the Lettermen's scholarship given at the end of the year to the boy voted by the club members as the most active and scholastically qualified.

Table Tennis Club practices for tournaments

Energy and quick action are integral parts in developing skill in playing table tennis. Started on an experimental basis in 1963, the Table Tennis club has made a permanent place for itself in Sexton's activities roster. Agility and accuracy gained in club practice sessions are demonstrated in the fast-moving doubles and singles tournaments that bring the year's meetings to a close.

Safety and marksmanship are Rifle Club's goals

Members of the Rifle Clubs strive to become better marksmen. As a part of the National Rifle Association, boys shooting superior ratings may receive diplomas for high scores. However, not only marksmanship but safety and discipline in the use of fire arms are the club's prominent objectives. Competition within the Rifle Clubs is keen. The boys work in groups of two or three in order to criticize and help each other develop their skill. Prone, sitting, kneeling, and off-hand positions are used while practicing in the rifle range in the school basement.

New club investigates conservation

A new club at Sexton this year, the Conservation Club was organized by Dr. Hal Bergan in order to inform interested young people of the vocational opportunities in the field of conservation. Several conservation specialists spoke to the group. Of the topics discussed, that on the means of improving the hunter-farmer relationship seemed to interest club members the most. Brought to the attention of these interested students was the fact that unless everyone becomes conservation minded, there will be nothing left of America's natural beauty in twenty-five years. The Conservation Club investigated means of conserving what natural resources and beauty America now has.

Members of the Conservation Club are Dr. Hal Bergan, advisor, Rick Tubandt, Ron Allen, Dave Hester and Don Stevens, President.

Lectures teach operators skills

Amateur Radio Club initiates expand their knowledge of the construction and operation of the radio during the first semester. Lectures prepared by more knowledgeable club members serve to inform those just beginning to investigate this interesting and technical field. Comprehension of relatively basic topics leads to discussions of more difficult concepts such as the vacuum tube theory, simple audio oscillators and amplifiers, and the transistor theory. Members of this group are bound together by their sincere interest and enthusiasm.

JETS co-sponsor annual science seminar

The Junior Engineering Technical Society, better known as the JETS, participated in several projects during the year. As one of the co-sponsors of the Lansing area Science Seminar, Sexton's club was responsible for the program of one meeting. One of the club's main objectives this year was cataloging all of the materials in Mr. Reid's room, 217, available for use in experimentation.

As the programs of regular Friday club sessions, JETS discuss such subjects as the orbiting of space satellites, calculating the horsepower of gas engines, and computer programing. Under the guidance of the sponsor Mr. Reid and club officers, the JETS have fulfilled the club's goal of investigating topics of interest for those boys interested in engineering or technical careers.

New techniques inspire creative photography

An avid interest in picture taking characterizes Photography Club members. The Eastman-Kodak Company supplied movies and slides during the past year to teach various techniques. Such topics as background contrast, choice of subject matter, and enlarging were presented in order to inspire sharper, more creative photography.

Due to the limited time the club has during Friday meetings, consideration was given to holding night sessions. Skills introduced in movies would be practiced at that time.

Playoff tournament determines accomplished clubmembers

Thirteen red and black spotted cards stare bridge players in the face during second hour on Fridays. In competing for high scores each week, successful manipulation of these cards is vital. Competition reaches a peak in the spring playoff tournament between Bridge X and Bridge Y. Winners' names are engraved on a plaque provided jointly by the two clubs. The mastery of the finer points of scoring, bidding, and finessing provides sufficient topics for the clubs' meetings. Bridge is a game of wits for both those who are trying to make a bid and those who are working to set them. It is a game of skill in which proficiency comes only after a great amount of study and practice.

The Commerce Club consisted of twelve girls who were all pursuing one thing—a business career. In the course of studying job qualifications and listening to lectures on business, club members discovered qualities and skills employers look for in choosing personnel. Joint meetings with the Office Technique Club constituted several programs, and a field trip to the Oldsmobile business offices provided the group an inside look at a “big-business” office. The personnel director of Oldsmobile, Mr. Shields, spoke to the club on business processes and goals. Although it sounds unbelievable to many struggling geometry, algebra, and trig. students, mathematics can be extremely interesting. Members of the nationally affiliated Math Club enjoyed exploring new veins of the field of math through speakers from M.S.U., L.C.C., and city high schools. Student presentations of their required projects pointed out club enthusiasm. Topics for discussion included magic graphs, matrices, and set theory. Sexton's chapter organized a city-wide Math Club. This new group met once a month; the first meeting was concerned with different professions which utilize mathematics.

During the year its main project was the adoption of an orphan from Hong Kong. Other service projects included filling Thanksgiving baskets for the needy and participation in the teen collection of Doughnuts for Muscular Distrophy. To encourage school spirit, club members made several hundred red and white pompoms for a home football game. Funds for the projects came from a candy sale and a dance after the basketball game with Jackson High School. A ski trip to Grayling for the weekend and a canoe trip to the same area were two more important social activities of the year. A joint meeting with Everett's Hi-Y Club was in the form of a play night, including ski films and swimming.

New series on campus life introduced

A new concept was introduced into the two Bible clubs last year. Under the title of Campus Life, the clubs are now emphasizing the resolving of a student's problems spiritually. One particularly interesting speaker, Reverend Inness from Maple Grove Baptist Church, provided personal consultation along with his lecture to the club members. Learning and fellowship with students of different denominations made an engrossing combination for participants in Bible X and Y.

Bible Club president, Denny Williams, interprets a passage from the Bible to be related to the theme of a club meeting.

Hodierni Romani draws parallels between Roman and American cultures

The first semester meetings of Hodierni Romani, Sexton's Latin Club, involved Roman influence in relation to the present day. Speakers explained Roman holidays and gave examples of corresponding American holidays. The Roman Banquet, held on April 19, included the members of the Junior Classical League. A Roman theme, dress, food, and entertainment were presented to the guests who were waited upon by "slaves" dressed in short tunics. Weeks of work went into planning the program of original skits. Slides of the splendors of Greece and Rome were inspiring to those who already dreamed of travel.

German Club Scholarship established for an outstanding senior

Last year the German Club endeavored to promote interest in its activities through a varied program. The main project for the year was the establishment of a German Club Scholarship. This scholarship, of an amount so far undetermined, is to be awarded to a senior active in German Club who has maintained a high scholastic average. In connection with its study of Germany and its culture, members of the club presented programs on German cuisine, German Christmas customs, and attended foreign films featuring Germany. Jay Petersen, a past German Club president, showed the slides he took while studying in Berlin in the summer of 1965.

Barb Wecker, Nancy Proctor, and Laura Quackenbush look over the plans for second semester activities.

Cuban's Christmas brightened

Bringing joy to the first Christmas of a Cuban family in the United States proved one of the more rewarding deeds of Sexton's Spanish Club this year. The members supplied food, gifts for the two girls, and a tree along with their hands in the trimming.

Two typically Spanish feasts were observed this year. The city wide fiesta that the club participated in took place at Everett. An unusual life size puppet show entertained the guests. Both at the first fiesta and the one held in the spring, club members experienced the thrill of smashing an authentic piñata.

As a recent tourist of Spain, guest speaker Linnea Struble transported the Spanish enthusiasts across the miles to España.

Authentic food at French banquet

Several ingenious methods of encouraging members of the French Club to use the French they have learned in speaking have been employed in the last year. Club members completed a game of French Bingo by pasting magazine pictures on the card squares. A scrambled letter game of French words and slides of France provided the programs for two meetings. At the Christmas party, Mrs. Rosemary Heist presented a discussion of French customs. Refreshments were put in the individuals shoes as is done in France today during the holiday season. The French club held a banquet in the spring; members provided all of the food which they prepared from French recipes.

Parrot Players demonstrate skills in Christmas and Memorial Day acts

Sexton's dramatics club members, the Parrot Players, gain valuable practical experience in the various aspects of the theater-lighting, blocking, and most of all, acting technique. Charades is often the program for meetings, and members are encouraged to participate in the plays produced at school and elsewhere.

Among the many activities of this group are the Christmas and Memorial Day assemblies, entertaining both students and faculty. The club chooses the plays, casts members and works out all the technical problems. Rehearsals are held during the allotted club meeting time and after school.

"You may exterminate them in absentia," states a madwoman (Ann Hagerty) to the Countess (Mary Mellor).

Jill Carter and Bruce Courey rehearse an exciting bit during the dress rehearsal.

"The Madwoman of Chaillot" attracts large crowd

The struggle between good and evil has been going on for centuries. This concept was presented on the stage as Sexton students performed The Madwoman of Chaillot. The scene is Paris in the district of Chaillot. The Countess (Mary Mellor) and her madwomen friends (Ann Hagerty, Ann Zajac, and Nancy Spalding) characterize the blithe side. They live a cloistered life, refusing to acknowledge that corruption exists. The evil is depicted by the Prospector (Jill Carter), Corporation President (John Koutouzos), the Broker (Mike Toman), and the Baron (John Mills) as they devise a cunning plot to destroy Chaillot by drilling for oil under Paris. In learning of the fiendish maneuver from the vagabonds, the Countess successfully resolves a scheme to overcome the wicked conspirators.

The performance ended on a familiar note: good conquers evil.

"Look, nothing you can give me to eat or drink will make me change my mind," states Jim Toy firmly.

"Do you see that woman over there? She's mad!" exclaims Jill Carter to John Koutouzos, John Mills, and Mike Toman.

"I am the Law!" shrieks Ragpicker (Mike Coss) as Dave Mace and Marianne Stornant cower in the tense trial scene.

The four madwomen, Ann Hagerty, Ann Zajac, Mary Mellor and Nancy Spalding played demanding roles in this production.

For one brief shining moment . . . Camelot

"In short, there's simply not a more congenial spot for happ'ly-ever-aftering than here in Camelot!"

The endless human yearning for immortality has found expression in many legends, but in none more romantically than in the story of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table. This story is told in "Camelot."

The story by Alan J. Lerner begins with the first meeting of the youthful King Arthur (Mike Coss) and the beautiful Guenevere (Chris Addison), when neither knew they had already been betrothed. It traces their days of happiness together and the events that led to Arthur's bitter failure to achieve his dream of perfect peace and order for his kingdom, due to the villainy of Sir Mordred (Marc Decker) and the traitorous love of Guenevere and Arthur's bravest knight, Sir Lancelot (Brad Smith).

Entwined through this romantic legend, where a mythical medieval monarch momentarily held a resplendent court of perfect knights and ladies, are some of Frederick Loewe's most lyrical song hits, including "If Ever I Would Leave You," "C'est Moi!" "How to Handle a Woman," "What Do Simple Folk Do?" and the title song, "Camelot."

The story, as told and re-told by the troubadours and the poets, paints Camelot as indeed a shining place where chivalry and honor and romance and beauty thrived, for one brief shining moment.

"Resolved: We shall live through this together, Excalibur . . . they . . . you . . . and I . . . And God have mercy on us all."

"Your hair streaked with sunlight . . . Your lips red as flame . . . Your face with a lustre that puts gold to shame. Oh, no, not in springtime! Summer, winter, or fall! No, never could I leave you at all."

"If I escape, I shall come and rescue you [Guenevere]. If I am killed, send word to Joyous Gard. Someone will come."

Activities, games, parties, and fun comprise much of a senior's time—that is, when he is not doing the necessary projects and long terms. As he begins to make important decisions about his future—what college to attend, what job to apply for, what branch of the service to enter—he begins, if only inside himself, to realize that some of the best days of his life are speeding quickly past. The world of a senior is fun-filled and idealistic; it is optimistic and happy—all preceding that great day in June—graduation day.

Hours of practice for perfection symbolize the tradition of high achievement for which Sexton's music department is known. The harmony involved in all phases of music must be produced as written, if the effects intended by the composer are to come through clearly. But, a large part of the pleasure in music, both in playing and listening, is that it may be interpreted according to the experiences and moods of the individual. The preciseness of every chord struck by any of the musical groups is a tremendous objective in itself. The J.W. Sexton music department is interested in not only this exact harmony, but also in the effects that may be produced with the tools at hand.

The many performances of the year exhibit the products of each group's long hours of work.

The drum majors strut to the rousing tempo of the J.W. Sexton Marching Band whose activity begins before the commencement of school each fall. This is the time when the new sophomores are trained to keep step and pace in the intricate routines construed by Mr. Duane Corbett, the band director. Then, when classes start, practices for all marchers are often held during both first hour and home room period. Each piece of music is carefully memorized, and each beat attached to some phase of a synchronized drill.

Eventually the weeks of hard work and frustration pay off. The group plays and marches with precision at the home football games, two away games, M.S.U. Band Day, and on television on Thanksgiving Day.

The school's pride in this musical unit is most warmly and fully expressed by the spontaneous cheer given as the band files rapidly onto the football field.

Band, orchestra set musical moods

The concert band practices daily in preparation for its annual spring concert. Coordinated within the harmony of the entire unit are solo and sectional parts which give exceptional musicians an opportunity to demonstrate their ability. Outstanding members of the concert band play in both the band and the orchestra. The themes from movies and Broadway plays provide new "non-long hair" material for this group whose repertoire ranges from Strauss to Mancini.

Strings, woodwinds, brass, and timpany constitute the orchestra under the direction of Mr. Duane Corbett. Tones of the different instrumental sections combine in a wide variety of music in the spring concert and then split into small groups for the solo and ensemble festival in March. Practices are generally held once a week for the entire orchestra and oftener for the separate sections. The orchestra also played the score for the all-school musical Camelot.

Characteristic of most dance bands are its saxophonists. Eric Taylor plays in Sexton's Dance Band, which rehearses outside of school time.

liven student activities

Playing at various school functions, the Sexton pep band livens games and pep-assemblies. "La Dee Da," "Peter Gunn," and "War Dance" rate as traditional favorites among the avid spectators. The band plays these songs often to keep up morale and add vitality to the events at hand.

This "team" is composed of a group of school-spirited students who play regularly in the concert band. Participation is completely voluntary, so practices occur frequently at the beginning of the year and then spasmodically throughout the remainder of the football and basketball seasons.

The dance band's main objective is not to make money, but to act as a means of relaxation, enjoyment, and practice for those who participate. The weekly practices culminate in a student assembly and a part in the spring band concert. Its repertoire, being large and diverse, makes interesting playing for members and interesting listening for the audience.

Choristers rate

“excellent” at contest

Participants in the A Cappella choir, Sexton's largest music group, spent hours of practice on the Christmas and Easter programs. At an assembly for the students, the choir presented popular folk music, with Mary Bollman and Nancy Harrington singing “Country Boy.” These singers received an excellent (1) rating in the choir contest March 5.

The Girls' Glee Club worked for perfection of the numbers to be sung in their annual concert. Many members of the group were underclassmen preparing for membership in the A Cappella choir.

The Madrigal singers, the extra-curricular vocal group, performed specially arranged numbers for church and non-profit civic organizations as well as school vocal music concerts. Exceptional singers auditioned for their membership in this small company.

Piano accompanists, Mary Bollman and Nancy Harrington, spent endless hours preparing for the choir's performances.

Although the future possesses the minds of most seniors, the world of high school surrounds the thoughts of underclassmen. Sophomores undergo the trying initiation into Sexton while juniors grope for a place in school society. The thrill of attending the first football game and trying out for plays and teams during their first year at Sexton captures sophomore interest. A little more knowledge of how Sexton clicks provides many openings for juniors to fill. The lasting friendships, marvelous experiences, and higher education received at Sexton supply a good basis for students' growth into adulthood.

Constituting a successful team are ability and the desire to win. Coupled with an excellent coaching staff and cheering throngs of students, the result is a Sexton team, one of the finest in the state.

With a long record of State contentions, Sexton athletic teams are striving to keep up their past record. Scorning defeat, the Big Reds push just that much harder for victory. This "push" is the drive that Sexton teams have always produced and will retain in the future.

Sports

Coach and team tensely await the final gun during the cliffhanger against Everett.

Coach Ed Majdeski after clinching the city title.

Versatile George Redden takes a brief rest during the Everett game.

Queen candidates, Linda Lyon and Nancy Richards, represent the senior class well.

At the moment of her crowning by 1964 queen, Sue Giroux, the thrill of success almost overcame Nancy Richards.

Coronations culminate

Several of Sexton's royalty, Dave Dykema and Joan Hosley, Dave Berry and Linda Lyon, and Charlie Davis and Nancy Richards, dance the traditional "First Dance" after the coronation.

Though the night was cold and wet the spirit of the 1965 Homecoming Activities was not dampened. The pitch of excitement mounted steadily during the preceding week until the final balloting by the student body was completed at the pep assembly on Friday. That night decorated cars and the float paraded through the downtown area.

As the queen candidates stood out on the field tensely anticipating, the final reckoning, the announcer's voice blared, "The 1965 Homecoming Queen is—Miss Nancy Richards. The king is—Mr. Charlie Davis! We offer our congratulations!" Later, at the Homecoming Dance, King Charlie Davis was crowned—a fine climax to a memorable event.

The 1965 Homecoming Court was composed of Charlie Davis, Nancy Richards, Dave Berry, Linda Lyon, Dave Dykema, Joan Hosley, Tom McGurrin, Claudia Wilson, Chris Hutchinson, Kathy Irvine, Mike Mills, and Surae Eaton.

Paced by co-captains Roger Rook and Larry Middleton, Sexton's cross country team had their best season since 1962. These two seniors made a consistent effort throughout the season, earning themselves special recognition by their teammates. Mr. James Reid, the harriers' coach, predicts an even stronger team for next year with juniors Chuck Clark and Scott Harvey returning after two years of experience. Both Chuck and Scott came on strong toward the end of the season; sophomore Marvin Lynch also put forth a great individual effort. Strong legs and long, gruelling practices will give promise to the 1966 season.

Harriers' season best since

Putting on a final spurt of speed, sophomore Marvin Lynch dashes across the finish line.

In a blur of arms and legs, co-captain Roger Rook runs the two-mile course.

Although handed their share of defeats, finishing the season 5-11, the Big Red five game an all-out effort to win. Dedicated and hard working, the boys spent nightly practice sessions drilling lay-ups, free throws, fast breaks, and sound defense tactics. Something of the balance and cohesion necessary for a consistently winning team was lacking at decisive points in play, leaving Sexton's team a little under the margin needed for a victory.

The Junior Varsity profitted greatly from a year of tough competition. Not having worked as a team before, the J.V.'s had to acquire a measure of uniformity in playing procedures and patterns. The boys anticipate a more successful season next year.

Cheerleaders spark school spirit

The junior varsity and varsity cheerleaders led the school through another year's major athletic events. The girls' enthusiasm and energy promoted school spirit and good sportsmanship.

Varsity cheerleaders were chosen in the spring, junior varsity in the fall. The selections were made on the basis of leadership, coordination, a sparkling smile, and a willingness to work hard. Last year the varsity cheerleaders earned money for new sweaters by checking coats at dances held after home football and basketball games. The cheerleaders made an important contribution in making the athletic year successful.

The cheerleaders have proven by their execution of cartwheel-splits and round-offs that it is really unnecessary to put them in a glass case.

Rob Flewelling, who set a school record of :22.7 for the 50 yard freestyle, takes off determinedly from the starting block.

4th in 6A

Setting a new pace proved to be a common occurrence for the swim team of '65-'66. Striving for self-improvement, three seniors washed out old school records in backstroke and freestyle.

Ron Reynolds, a three-year Varsity backstroker, pushed aside the old record by swimming 100 yards in 1:00.3. Ron competed in the 6A and took first place; representing Sexton in the State meet, Ron finished 10th among the competition.

Rob Flewelling, a three-year sprinter for Sexton, churned out a 22.7 setting a new mark for the 50 yard freestyle. Playing a dual role, he also swam in the 100 yard event. Rob snatched the number one spot in the 50 yard freestyle in the 6A, while later he closed second in the 100 yard competition.

Long distances were Henk Kohler's specialty, as he aptly proved by setting a school record in the 200 yard freestyle with a 1:57.8. Like his team mates Rob and Ron, Henk was also a three-year Varsity swimmer.

Through gruelling practices and well-coordinated efforts of the entire team, Sexton swimmers fared well this season.

Although the Big Red Grapplers finished the season with a 5-5 record, they had several fine individual efforts. Sexton's wrestlers finished 3rd in the 6A, with Bob Canada the only champion at 165 pounds. Four men qualified for participation in the state meet, where Billy Lee placed 3rd at 133 pounds. Knight McKesson, Bob Canada, and Henry Wray also qualified for the meet but did not place in the finals.

The 1965-66 season was one of rebuilding for the matmen. Of the varsity squad, only three were seniors. The Junior Varsity Squad finished with a 4-3 record. Wrestling Awards were: Most Valuable Player, Knight McKesson; Fastest Pin, Knight McKesson; Captain Award, Bill Lee; Most Improved Player, Bob Canada; Gas Can Award, Stu Hanley; Academic Award, Bob Stow (for 3rd year).

Minor league clubs teach baseball players the fundamentals before they progress to major leagues. In much the same manner, the junior varsity squad gives Sexton athletes experience. The Little Reds, under the direction of Coach Dick Bates, played a nine game schedule. Although they met defeat eight times, winning once against Waverly, the young players became veterans anxious to begin the next season wearing Big Red uniforms.

Led by co-captains Joe Barnett and Rick Shannon, the 1965 track team placed an admirable third in the Michigan State Relays. Coach Ed Majdeski was pleased when both Charlie Davis and Tom Miller set school records. Charlie ran the high hurdles in 14.4 seconds; his fellow senior, Tom Miller, pole vaulted 12'6 3/4". Charlie Davis also won the honor of being voted "most valuable player" by his teammates.

Vicky Green's ears echo with the commands: Swimmers take your marks, get set, GO!

Paula Arney finds that keeping the ball out of the gutter is a far more difficult task than any non-bowler can begin to imagine!

Manipulating tricky shots are pocket pool sharks, Kathy Becket, Nancy Fleming, Miss Janet MacDonald, Karen Ferrill, and Sue Wager.

While competing in the annual Inter-City Girls' Swim Meet, the Sexton girls' swim team clinched the city title, taking the trophy from Everett. Sexton gathered 71.5 points to Everett's 58.5 and Eastern's 13 points by winning first places in eight out of twelve events. Big Red swimmers made a strong start by winning the 25 yard freestyle, the 25 yard butterfly, sidestroke, breaststroke, and front crawl form, the 50 yard backstroke, and the diving events.

For the speed events each of the three schools was allowed to enter two girls in the preliminaries. From the preliminaries, the girls with the four best times swam in the finals. Following the event, the winners were presented with first, second, and third place ribbons. The diving events were conducted similarly; each diver required to make one front dive, one back dive, and one optional dive. Then, according to the place points that the separate schools earned, Sexton girls were rated number one in the city.

Homeroom teams engage in intramural basketball competition for both the exercise and the fun.

Pacing each other 600 yards around Sexton's track are five prospective girls' track stars.

Form swimmers spent endless hours perfecting their strokes for the inter-school meet where the girls' swim team took first place.

With the emphasis placed on boys' sports, girls' activities seldom held the spotlight. Even so, there were some very successful girls' teams in volleyball and swimming. Both sophomore and junior volleyball teams defeated Everett but lost at the hands of Eastern. The senior team was victorious over its two opponents.

Among the other sports girls took part in were track and basketball. Girls' basketball holds little similarity to the boys' games; however, the differences were minimized enough to provide a fun-filled, although hectic, senior boys versus senior girls basketball game.

Mr. Dior, our Vice President, admires Marsha Breininger.

These cheerleaders got in the dogs because their senior girls' team lost to the senior boys.

FINISHING-MODELING-AIRLINE-TRAVEL CAREER

Would you believe that these boys won six gold, three silver, and two bronze Olympic medals? Would you believe one wooden medal? We didn't either, that's why they are in the dogs.

INSURANCE COMPANY

HOME OFFICE AT LANSING, MICHIGAN

Always remember that good insurance plays an important role as you seek financial security in the years that lie ahead. An experienced, independent agent to counsel and serve, a strong company to carry your protection, broad policies to give you complete coverage . . . these you should look for.

IN '66 ... in a Rocket Action Olds

DYNAMIC 88

Here's why so many Dynamic 88 owners are two-timers
(and three-timers, and four-timers, and...)

Dynamic 88 owners keep coming back again and again, because Dynamic 88 keeps coming back better and better. These new '66 models, for example: Longer, lower-looking. More action from a 425-cu.-in. Super Rocket V-8! Check your Olds Dealer and see: Dynamic 88 has it all wrapped up for you in a stylish big way! LOOK TO OLDS FOR THE NEW!
